

Masaryk University Offers Online Preparatory Courses for Medical Studies

news | 13 January 2016 | editor

Photo: Gans lodipholo.com

A new e-learning course for foreign applicants was launched by Masaryk University.

All the chapters of the courses also contain “problem solving”.

Foreigners interested in studying at the Faculty of Medicine of Masaryk University in the Czech Republic can now prepare for the entrance exam using online courses. In January 2016 the faculty launches three e-learning courses for foreign applicants – Chemistry, Biology and Physics in English. Good knowledge from secondary school is a necessary condition for successful admission and for the actual studies.

“We want to admit the best possible students to the Faculty of Medicine of Masaryk University. Due to the differences in education systems in different countries, the knowledge of people interested in studying is not unified and they lack the information on how to prepare for the entrance exams. And since we do not want to lose capable and promising candidates, we have put together full e-learning preparatory courses,” explained the Vice-Dean of the Faculty of Medicine Eva Táborská.

In addition to the typical lectures and study materials, all the chapters of the courses also contain “problem solving”, which demonstrates the practical application of theoretical knowledge. There are also questions for practising, in which the students can check their knowledge and learn from their mistakes. The students can obtain missing information by communicating with tutors or with each other in Discussion Groups. It is recommended that the students should go to the final tests simulating the real entrance exams after they are confident of their knowledge because they are allowed to repeat the test only three times. “The idea of a student reading through all the chapters of the course, memorizing the answers to the questions and being instantly ready to pass the entrance exam is wrong. It is necessary for the students to be active and take advantage of all the possibilities the courses offer,” described Táborská.

The interest of foreign secondary school students in studies of General Medicine or Dentistry at the Faculty of Medicine of Masaryk University is constantly increasing. Currently the faculty has more than 500 foreigners out of a total of 4 000 students.

Masaryk University has its own e-learning platform for buying and studying online courses. It is the study Information System. “The system is used for both learning and teaching at Masaryk University, and online courses for the public,” adds the Head of the Development of the Information System Michal Brandejs from the Faculty of Informatics of Masaryk University, specifying: “Once a student purchases the course, he/she can start studying the e-learning course immediately, because everything from the purchase until the end of the course runs automatically in one system.”

The courses are available at the university website and cost 100 euros each.

More info: Helena Melicharová, Head of the Office of International Studies, Faculty of Medicine, phone: +420 549 49 8188, e-mail: hmelichar@med.muni.cz