WITNESSES

A FILM BY ELLIOTT EARLS

FIRST THINGS FIRST MANIFESTO 2000

We, the undersigned, are graphic designers, art directors and visual communicators who have been raised in a world in which the techniques and apparatus of advertising have persistently been presented to us as the most lucrative, effective and desirable use of our talents. Many design teachers and mentors promote this belief; the market rewards it; a tide of books and publications reinforces it.

Encouraged in this direction, designers then apply their skill and imagination to sell dog biscuits, designer coffee, diamonds, detergents, hair gel, cigarettes, credit cards, sneakers, butt toners, light beer and heavy-duty recreational vehicles. Commercial work has always paid the bills, but many graphic designers have now let it become, in large measure, what graphic designers do. This, in turn, is how the world perceives design. The profession's time and energy is used up manufacturing demand for things that are inessential at best.

Many of us have grown increasingly uncomfortable with this view of design. Designers who devote their efforts primarily to advertising, marketing and brand development are supporting, and implicitly endorsing, a mental environment so saturated with commercial messages that it is changing the very way citizen-consumers speak, think, feel, respond and interact. To some extent we are all helping draft a reductive and immeasurably harmful code of public discourse.

There are pursuits more worthy of our problem-solving skills. Unprecedented environmental, social and cultural crises demand our attention. Many cultural interventions, social marketing campaigns, books, magazines, exhibitions, educational tools, television programs, films, charitable causes and other information design projects urgently require our expertise and help.

We propose a reversal of priorities in favor of more useful, lasting and democratic forms of communication - a mindshift away from product marketing and toward the exploration and production of a new kind of meaning. The scope of debate is shrinking; it must expand. Consumerism is running uncontested; it must be challenged by other perspectives expressed, in part, through the visual languages and resources of design.

In 1964, 22 visual communicators signed the original call for our skills to be put to worthwhile use. With the explosive growth of global commercial culture, their message has only grown more urgent. Today, we renew their manifesto in expectation that no more decades will pass before it is taken to heart.

SPORTS STARS AND CELEBRITY

In 1951, television had yet to assert its hypnotic hold: the general interest magazine still held the mass American audience's gaze. Collier's recalls the victory covers that celebrated the end of the Second World War (colour the helmet green and you're there): the sports star as granite-jawed hero surrounded by a jubilant, adoring crowd. By 1978, Muhammad Ali—his celebrity elevated to the point where he can be signified by a single three letter word, almost anywhere in the world—is represented by Rolling Stone in more ambiguous terms, the hands that have made his fortune and fame almost occupying as much of the frame as his face. The jaw may be still set strong, but the eyes, in their penetrating directness, suggest depth and sensitivity. A decade later, sports celebrity has taken another cultural turn. "Boris Becker Inc.: A Star and His Money", reads Newsweek's cover line. Whilst the representation of personal talent and power is there in the shot, a dynamic study in muscle and sinew, the story is all about financial clout. Becker's own trajectory after the end of his playing career is spookily emblematic of where sports celebrity went next: downhill into sexual drama, marriage break-up, financial scandal and the inevitable career rebirth... as a media celebrity.

QUEEN AND TOWN MAGAZINES

Queen and Town were magazines which evolved from conventional beginnings—one as a Society glossy and the other as tailoring trade title—to embody the transformation of British society and culture in the late 1950s and early 1960s. The distance travelled between The Queen of 1950 and the Queen of February 1965 is extraordinary. Both

CELEBRITY ROYALS

It has been noted that, before the invention of modern celebrity, the only comparable groups to enjoy such notoriety were gods and royalty. Magazine covers through the early decades of the twentieth century certainly represented a crossover period between the royals—deities never seemed to do that well in terms of cover presence—and the movie stars who inaugurated the age of celebrity. The problem for royalty was that editors kept them on the cover out of a sense of duty, whereas movie stars reflected the audience's desires. Add the fact that much European royalty was unattractive and unfashionable (Americans enjoyed the advantage of not having to clear all this dead wood out of the way before they could get on with being modern) and it becomes obvious that it wasn't much of a contest. Royalty, of course, did not subsequently disappear from the cultural agenda: it became another specialist interest subject, as these covers of Majesty magazine demonstrate. But it has often been driven to adopt many of the lurid characteristics of 'proper' celebrity in order to maintain a position on mainstream magazines.

Zappa Scores 200

Handwritten musical score for 'Time Out' by Frank Zappa. The score is written for a large ensemble, including Soprano (SOP), Alto (ACC), Oboe (OB), Bassoon (BASS), Trombone (B. TRB), Trumpet (TRBA), Percussion (ORCA P.B.), Chorus (CHORUS), Bass (BASS), Harp (HARP), and Piano (PNO). The notation is dense and includes various musical notations such as notes, rests, dynamics (pp, mf, ff), articulations (detaché, sizzle), and performance instructions (e.g., 'NO NO NO!', 'BELLS JINGLE', 'I'M STEALING THE ROOM', 'DO YOU WORRY...'). The score is organized into systems, with each instrument or voice part on its own staff. The overall style is characteristic of Zappa's complex and often satirical musical compositions.

According to the Warren Commission there was a lone assassin who fired three bullets at the Lukole rifugiato-tanz. Nigeria, Tanzania. We have Lenny, a resident of Lukole, a refugee camp in Tanzania.

This is his story.

COLORS

Colors' approach to history is to treat it as cultural anthropology, focusing on the shared global dilemmas that make our planet one world as much as commercial globalisation does. Covers can be moving and honest (Issue 67); raw and provocative (Issue 28); or pointedly ironic (Issue 23)—each of these examples maintains the challenging creative positioning established by founder/art director Tom Kalman and erstwhile Benetton creative director Oliviero Toscani. Issue 41 reflects a different shade of Colors: the first issue to feature a new look by designer Fernando Guitierrez. The naive illustration contrasts with the magazine's tradition of in-your-face photography: the cover sidesteps controversy to articulate the individualism and dignity of a resident of the Lukole refugee camp in Tanzania, an unexpected yet appropriate way for the magazine to flag up a different approach to its issue-based coverage—the devotion of a whole issue to personal stories of the camp's inhabitants.

mediation of a mainstream music press. Sniffin' Glue, the so-called bible of the punk movement, was founded by Mark Perry in July 1976 and folded by him a year later, a victim of its own success, having increased its circulation from 50 copies to 15,000. Tony Drayton started the influential Ripped & Torn in Glasgow around the same time. It lasted until 1979. Situation 3 was closely associated with the seminal Rough Trade record shop and narrowly escaped prosecution in Scotland after featuring an erect penis on the cover of one issue.

DESIGN MAGAZINES

There seem to have been design magazines for as long as the discipline has existed: their covers articulate a shifting polemic on what design actually means. Gebrauchsgraphik Jahrgang, founded in Berlin in 1924, was influential in spreading

ARTISTS AND ART MAGAZINES IN THE EARLY TWENTIETH CENTURY

The disruptive artistic movements of the twentieth century enjoyed a symbiotic relationship with the specialist publications that promoted their ideas and disseminated their artworks and writings. Minotaure, 1933 to 1939, was a sumptuous Surrealist publication with fantastic covers, colour printing and work by leading figures such as Picasso, Dali and in this case Max Ernst. The now rare Blad Voor Kunst was an outlet for Expressionist artists in The Netherlands. Transatlantic title Broom, launched in 1921, was a template for the twentieth century 'little' literary review, an 'aristocratic format' that showcased experimental writing and painting with luxurious production values. Another product of the seemingly endless supply of publishers willing to fund the promotion of Modernism, Transition billed itself as "An International Quarterly for Creative Experiment". As well as publishing works in progress by writers such as Joyce and Kafka, it also featured artworks by the likes of Hans Arp, Paul Klee, Alberto Giacometti, Kurt Schwitters and, the creator of this cover, Joan Miró. Despite looking like an organ of Constructivism, Revue Cenna was actually a splendidly produced 1950s showcase for the French trade organisation representing printers and paper manufacturers. This issue came wrapped in a characteristic illustration by Fernand Leger.
