Course Description

This course is intended to help masters students improve their academic writing skills and practice English. Sociology 470 is intended for Czech students, while international students should enroll in SOC776. This is a writing-intensive course that provides training in the methods of researching and writing Sociology essays in several different styles, such as writing book reviews, social issue reaction papers, and reports on quantitative and qualitative research. This writing experience is intended to enhance students' knowledge and understanding of sociological theory and methods and help them develop critical writing and reading skills to assist them in their Masters studies. By the end of the semester, they will gain experience writing in a variety of academic literary genres, learn about different perspectives on proper professional writing, understand and be able to follow academic honesty standards, and be able to cite information properly according to academic norms.

Assignments and Evaluation

Writing and Homework

- Homework: There will be several homework assignments so students can practice technical aspects of writing and demonstrate their understanding of the course requirements.
- Weekly essays: Approximately every two weeks, students will write two drafts of an essay based on the assigned reading. In each two-week cycle, students will write a draft of the essay in the first week. This draft essay will receive written and verbal feedback in class from the teacher and other students. You will use this peer review feedback to revise the essay and turn in a final draft during the second week. This gives you an opportunity to improve your writing and learn to give and receive constructive criticism. More details about these assignments will be given in class. Each essay should be 1500-2000 words in length.
- Final essay: A research essay 2000-3000 words in length is due in January 2010. You are invited to make your thesis topic the focus of this essay. More details will be provided in class.

Class Participation

- Attendance: All students are required to attend every seminar meeting. Any absence must be documented (for example, due to family or medical emergency). Your attendance is important because the course is organized around classroom discussion and giving feedback to each other.
- Discussion: Active participation in classroom discussion is an important part of your grade. You are required to read the assigned literature before the seminar meeting to facilitate discussion.

- Peer Review: Approximately every other week, we will engage in the written and oral in-class critique of each student's first-draft essay. Each student will be assigned to read another student's draft essay and give a presentation about suggested revisions.

Evaluation

The quality of your use of English is not part of the grade, but you must write the essays at an adequate level of language use such that they are understandable. Your essays should express your own ideas (see the section on Academic Honesty below). However, you are free to consult with classmates or others to check the quality of your use of English.

Students will receive a final letter grade (A-F) for the semester based on the follow criteria:

Final grade components	Final grade scale
10% - Homework	A = 90 – 100%
10% - Attendance and class participation	B = 80 – 90%
80% - Essay assignments	C = 70 – 80%
	D = 60 – 70%
	E = 50 – 60%
	F = <50%

Penalties for Late Assignments

Assignments should be submitted into the Assignments folder in the course's IS page by 11.59 on the due date, unless otherwise specified by the teacher. If you have trouble uploading to the IS, send the file to the teacher by e-mail. First drafts that are received late need not be read or commented on by the teacher or the author's peer review partner. Final drafts that are late will receive a grade of F and no feedback. Homework assignments received late will receive a grade of F.

E-mail Policy

Students may contact the instructor at any time by e-mail with questions about the course. I will strive to reply to your questions within 48 hours of receipt of your e-mail. I usually do not read or respond to e-mail on weekends or holidays.

Academic Honesty

The Faculty of Social Studies at MU expects students to know the study rules and maintain academic honesty by refraining from plagiarism and from cheating during exams. Plagiarism means that one presents other peoples' ideas as one's own and does not credit the author. Plagiarism is one of the most serious breaches of ethical standards in the academic environment, for it denies the mission of the university and the meaning of studying. From a legal perspective, plagiarism is the stealing of intellectual property. The official FSS policy on academic honesty is available in the course's interactive syllabus in IS in English and Czech. Academic dishonesty is not tolerated under any circumstances at FSS. The minimum penalty for academic dishonesty is expulsion from the course, a grade of F for the semester, and referral to the Faculty disciplinary committee.

In this course, students will become thoroughly acquainted with the problem of plagiarism and how to avoid it. If you have questions about plagiarism, contact the instructor. In the first weeks of class, students are required to read about ASA citation guidelines and write a short essay entitled "What is plagiarism and how can I avoid it?" Students are also required to read and sign a Statement on Academic Honesty and give it to the instructor within the first two weeks of class. These materials can all be found in the “Writing Resources” section of the interactive syllabus in IS.
