

The flag of Iraq is displayed horizontally across the top half of the page. It consists of three horizontal stripes: red on top, white in the middle, and black on the bottom. In the center of the white stripe, there is a green emblem featuring the Arabic calligraphy of the name "الله عز وجل" (Allah, Most High) on the right and the Arabic calligraphy of "الله اكبر" (Allah is Greatest) on the left.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE IRAQI FLAG

Iraq's flag has undergone multiple changes with shifts in political power and has been a point of contention in the country for years

1921 – 1958:
The Kingdom of Iraq was founded on 23rd of August 1921 under British administration.
The two seven-pointed stars in the red trapezoid denoted two principal peoples of the kingdom: the Arabs and the Kurds.

1958:
The Arab Federation of Iraq and Jordan was a country that lasted only six months in 1958 between February and August. The flag of the Union of Iraq and Jordan was basically that of Jordan but without the seven-pointed star.

1959 – 1963:
After the 14 July Revolution in 1958, Iraq became a republic. The black, white, green, and red represent pan-Arabism, while the yellow sun represented the Kurdish minority.

1963 – 1991:
The Ramadhan Revolution overthrew Prime Minister Qasim and the new government modified the flag to that of the United Arab Republic, consisting of four horizontal stripes with a central star expressing the aspiration of Iraq to join Egypt and Syria in a union.

1991-2004:
By order of Saddam Hussein the phrase "Allah Akbar" meaning "God is greatest" in Arabic, was added between the stars, in Hussein's own handwriting.

2004 – 2008:
The flag basically remained the same but the script was changed from Saddam Hussein's handwritten to traditional stylized Kufic script.

2008 – Present:
The three stars were removed for their relation to Saddam Hussein's regime, but the text remains in its 2004 form.

Iraqis were divided on what national anthem and flag to champion after the toppling of late President Saddam Hussein in 2003.
