Syllabus

U.S. Foreign Policy, Trumpian Populism and beyond

Fall semester 2021; 10/29; 12/01-03/2021

Lecturer: Prof. Dr. Sebastian Harnisch

Offline-Course held in Brno

Course description

This course examines various themes and patterns of U.S. foreign policy in the light of the Populism of the Trump administration and the policies of the current Biden administration. Students will explore institutions and individuals responsible for foreign policy decision making while considering different levels of analysis, i.e. the international system, domestic politics, as well as organizational and bureaucratic explanations. We will examine causes for U.S. policies over time, from different levels of analysis and a variety of theoretical perspectives. The goal is to obtain a fundamental understanding about the more general forces shaping U.S. foreign policy and apply this knowledge to the Trump and Biden presidencies.

Requirements

Students are required to participate actively in the offline seminar session, give an oral presentation and comment on one of the presentations by other students. Because of the workshop character of the course, all oral presentations (ppt slides) are due to be send to me (sebastian.harnisch@ipw.uni-heidelberg.de) for uploading on the HeiBox-Cloud-System and 48 hours before the respective course session begins. After the Upload of presentations other students will then be able to engage with the material beforehand; you can sign up for commentaries two days after the upload of the presentations by again sending an email to me. Since there may be up to 40 students in the class, oral presentations may be held in groups of up to three students.

Grading

The final grade is based on seminar participation (30%), the oral presentation (50%) and the commentary (20%). Students have to gain at least 60 points out of 100 to pass the course.
