Criminal Procedure in the Czech Republic

- Common Rules and Institutions of Criminal Procedure

Fundamental Principles of the Czech Criminal Procedure

Legality prosecution (regular lawful procedure, nullum crimen sine lege)

- According with article 8 par. 2 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms "nobody may be prosecuted or deprived of their freedoms other than for the reasons and in the manner stipulated by the law". Similar definition is under section 2 par. 1 of Criminal procedure Code. Procedural expression of the principle is presumption of innocence (article 39 of the Charter and section 2 par. 2 of the Criminal Procedure Code - "an individual may not be viewed as guilty until the court passes a legitimate conviction").

Mandatory prosecution

- According section 2 par. 3 of the Criminal procedure Code a public prosecutor is obligate to prosecute all criminal acts that are made known to him/her, unless a code or an international agreement to which the Czech Republic is bound stipulates something different.

Officiality prosecution

- According with section 2 par. 4 Criminal Procedure Code (police, public prosecutor and court) are to proceed with their official duties unless this code stipulates something different; they must deal with all criminal matters as fast as possible (especially custody cases and the cases with freezing of assets) and with a full inquiry of civil rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

Guilty beyond reasonable doubts

- According with section 2 par. 5 of the Criminal procedure Code the authorities responsible for criminal proceedings are to proceed in a manner which will determine the real state of an affair which is beyond reasonable doubts and to the extent that is necessary for their decision. Prevailing circumstances, whether favourable or unfavourable for the accused, can also be just as detrimental in determining a situation even without the parties of submission. Even an accused's confession does not relieve the authorities responsible for legal proceedings of the responsibility to verify all circumstances of the case.

Free evaluation of proofs/ facts

- According with section 2 par. 6 of the Criminal procedure Code the authorities responsible for criminal proceedings evaluate proofs according to their own conviction based on diligent consideration, taking into account all the circumstances individually and in total. Courts take decisions on grounds of the direct as well as circumstantial evidence. Principle of "free evaluation of evidence" is applied in the criminal proceedings in the Czech Republic. This means that no kind of evidence is being preferred. The entire evidence is weighed by the court in its correlation.

Accusatory procedure

- According with section 2 par. 8 of the Criminal Procedure Code trial before court is only possible on the basis of an indictment submitted by a public prosecutor (no private prosecution as applied).

Public session, oral and immediacy principles

- According with section 2 par. 10 of the Criminal procedure Code criminal matters are heard publicly so that the public may attend and watch the hearing. The public may be ruled out of court during trial and open sessions only in cases where this code expressly specifies it. Public can be excluded of the trial if a public hearing of a case would threaten a secrecy which is protected by a law act, a morality or untroubled running of the trial or security or another important interest of witnesses. The public can be excluded only for a part of the trial.

- According with section 2 par. 11 of the Criminal Procedure Code proceedings before court are oral; the evidence from testimony of witnesses, experts and the accused are conducted in a manner where the court itself conducts the hearing.
- According with section 2 par. 12 of the Criminal Procedure Code while rendering a decision in a trial, as well as in a public hearings, custody and closed sessions, the court may only take into consideration evidence which was presented during these proceedings.

Defence rights

- The individual, against whom the criminal proceeding is taken, must be informed about laws enabling him/her the full application of defence and the possibility to choose an attorney; all authorities responsible for criminal proceedings are obligated to enable the accused with the full application of his/her rights
- Everyone is authorised to use their mother tongue in front of the authorities responsible for criminal proceedings. The authorities responsible for criminal proceedings conduct their affairs and execute their decisions in the Czech language.

Right to use mother language

- Everyone is entitled to use his mother language before the authorities involved in criminal proceedings. These authorities run the proceedings and issue their decisions in the Czech language. If it is necessary to interpret the content of a statement or a written document or if the accused declares that he has no command of the language in which the proceedings are conducted, an interpreter shall be called in. The interpreter may at the same time be the recording clerk.
