Collocation

A collocation is a pair of words that are often used together. There are many different types of collocation. Here are some examples:

ADJECTIVE + NOUN	private school
VERB + NOUN	do your homework
ADVERB + ADJECTIVE	highly educated
VERB + ADVERB	study hard

Collocations are sometimes very different in English and your first language, for example:

In English we say...	We don't say...
take an exam	write an exam
make a mistake	did a mistake
a primary school	a basic school
a tall student	a high student

Native speakers will usually understand mistakes like write an exam, but learning collocations will help you sound more natural and fluent.

Finding collocations with SKELL

Sketch Engine for Language Learning (SKELL)¹ is an online tool that helps language learners understand more about how words are used in English. The Word sketch tool (1) will help you find useful collocations to learn, and the Examples tool (2) will show you simple examples of how words and phrases are used in real life.
