

RACISM (van Dijk)

they can't be trusted
they can't speak the language properly
they are uneducable
they can't behave/are violent
they are dirty
they are lazy
they take our jobs

ACCULTURATION

- necessity is to forget

- successful inclusion does not rest only in speaking the language properly

As Richard Rodriguez (1982) in Hunger for Memory says "to succeed one has to lose one's private identity and find a public one" (pp.9-40)

IDENTITY

A person in all societies is concerned with linking their personal existence to that of others and to find meaning, or part of meaning, through identification with others. The identification with others is a behaviour regulator, i.e. you observe the same norms as the group you want to identify yourself with, not only in language but also behaviour.
