Concepts - Taxonomy

To globalize is to plan the design and development methods for a product in advance, keeping in mind a multicultural audience, in order to avoid increased costs and quality problems, save time, and smooth the localizing effort for each region or country

Internationalization, encompasses the planning and preparation stages for a product that is built by design to support global markets. This process removes all cultural assumptions, and any country- or language-specific content is stored so that it can be easily adapted. The internationalization process is sometimes called translation or localization enablement.

Localization, refers to the actual adaptation of the product for a specific market. The localization phase involves four key elements: linguistic, physical, business and cultural, and technical issues.

A successfully localized service or product is one that appears to have been developed within the local culture

We noticed you had unfinished photos in your editor. Why not send a them out into the wild today?

When you discover a box of photos in grandma's attic, after you are able to overcome how gorgeous everyone looks and succumb to your nostalgia for a time when gentlemen wore hats, you can't help but appreciate the prints themselves: old photographs have so much character, and now yours can too.

The stockings are hung up, but are they filled?
