

The Eighteenth-Century Studies Links

There are many useful and interesting eighteenth century studies links to be taken advantage of on the www. Here are some of them:

<http://www.bsecs.org.uk/> – the official site of the British Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies. This society is devoted to all aspects of eighteenth-century cultural history, including history, art history, architecture, literature and culture. It has a section with other eighteenth century sites of its own.

<http://asecs.press.jhu.edu/> – the official site of the American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies (ASECS),

<http://www.jstor.org/browse/00132586?config=jstor> – access to all issues of the Eighteenth-Century Studies, the official journal of the ASECS, published by Johns Hopkins University since 1967.

<http://www.humnet.ucla.edu/humnet/c1718cs/> – site of the Center of Seventeenth- and Eighteenth-Century Studies at the University of California Los Angeles (UCLA).

<http://eserver.org/18th/> – fairly extensive archive of eighteenth century literary works as well as pieces of modern criticism. Systematically listed in alphabetical order.

<http://andromeda.rutgers.edu/~jlynch/18th/lit.html> – another remarkable archive with plenty of texts, both primary as well as secondary.

<http://wnnorton.com/nael/> – site of Norton Anthologies Students Resources On-line with audio readings, quiz tests as well as brief outlines of the relevant period's social background. Great site to browse through!

wnnorton.com/nael/noa – site of Norton on-line archive