Ad Stijnman

Originally these lists were published as Appendix 3 in my Engraving and Etching 1400–2000: A History of the Development of Manual Intaglio Printmaking Processes (London & Houten 2012), pp. 413–418. For its first revision see Delineavit et Sculpsit: Journal for Dutch and Flemish Prints and Drawings, (2017), no. 42 (Dec.), p. 105. The lists are updated annually since and can be found at <https://tulip88x.wixsite.com/ad--stijnman/recent-publications>, at the top. This is the version of 31 December 2020.

The following document may be used, copied and disseminated freely with proper reference to the compiler (Ad Stijnman) as long as it is not been changed in any way.

Introduction

A large variety of abbreviations and phrases given in the so-called ADDRESS(es)* of prints and illustrations are found from 1500. They supply information about persons' activities in production and publishing, dedications, years of publication and printing privileges.¹ These expressions are usually found in the lower margins of engravings, etchings and lithographs, less in woodcuts and wood engravings, rarely in metalcuts. Copper engravers started signing plates with their initials or marks from the 1450s.² The abbreviation F for fecit is used by Marcantonio Raimondi in MAF from c.1506. The term inventor is used on engravings by Raimondi after Raphael c.1510–1520 (INV.RAP.UR; RAPH.URBLINVEN; RAF.URB.INVENT ROMAE). The abbreviation S for sculptor or sculpsit is used by Jan Gossaert in IMS (1520–1522), Domenico Beccafumi in Inventor. S. (1530–1535) and Jacques Prévost in PS (intertwined, 1537).

Print publishers began expressing their involvement in prints in Germany in c.1515–1520 (Jost de Negker zu Augspurg), followed in Italy from the 1530s (Romae apud Philippum Thomassinum; Jouannes Baptista de Rubeis iunior formis Romae; Romae ex typis Antonij Lafreri; Ant. Lafrerii Formis; Ant. Sal. exc.) and by Hieronymus Cock in Antwerp after 1550 (excude). This may have derived from printers' devices in books showing publishers' names or marks with further information in letterpress. Goltzius organised the production of blocks and plates, including printing, in his Haarlem workshop in the 1580s (imprime and gedruckt in 1582, impressum in 1583). Giovanni Guerra engraved and printed (imprimi) a plate in 1586, published by Bartolomeo Grassi. Andrea Andreani signed woodblocks (impressit, 1585), and Crispyn de

Passe and Peter Over(r)adt copperplates they published as printers (impressor, imprimit, from c.1600). The first to be mentioned solely as plate printer is one Goyton on plates from the 1660s–1680s.³

Ugo Da Carpi applied for a privilege for his chiaroscuro printing in 1516.⁴ From the middle of the sixteenth century print publishers applied for privileges for particular prints or their publications in general, which gave a legal base for prosecution in case of breach of the privilege.⁵ For example, Erasmus Loy had specimens of his colour printed woodcuts stamped in black with phrases such as mit Rö. Kaij. Und Kbu. Maij. Freijhait, nit Nachzdruckhen. Multiple privileges and licences from authorities are also found, such as for Peter Paul Rubens who was granted triple privileges from the King of France, the Archduke of the Spanish Netherlands and the Dutch States General between 1619–1620.

Print addresses became standard following the professionalisation of the printing trade in the course of the sixteenth century. They were still used in the early nineteenth century by lithographers and steel engravers signing their stones and plates, but declining in the second half of the nineteenth century when prints were produced by companies and not by individual craftsmen anymore. In the first half of the twentieth century only names of publishing and printing companies were left. Nowadays, the artist's name, title, year and edition number are often written in pencil in the margin beneath the impression or on the back of the print. This gradually became common in the second half of the nineteenth century, with antecedents going back to the late seventeenth century and similar manners in books.⁶

Explanatory note

Below two lists are presented. The first list is the Glossary with alphabetically ordered authorised terms⁷, being a guide to the many Dutch, English, French, German, Italian, Latin, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish and Swedish terms, phrases and abbreviations found in print addresses. Per authorised term first the most common expressions are given with alternatives following (also). Cross references (see also) guide to related authorised terms. The second list is the Index containing all the expressions from the Glossary in alphabetical order with references to their authorised terms, check there for contexts. Still more expressions can be found, but those given here will help understanding them.

The word 'matrix' is defined here as any possible carrier from, by or through which an impression (print) is produced by means of transferring ink onto a support (paper, parchment, fabric, leather), but also including inkless impressions such as blind embossments and perforated supports.

However, Goyton also signed plates as publisher (exc.), so that he was also both a publisher and printer. The difference will be that he worked as a printer for someone else.

⁷ 'Authorised terms' are standardised expressions used within the present Glossary and Index; they should not be seen as literal translations, but rather as my interpretations of abbreviations and phrases.

Transcriptions:

- æ is transcribed as ‘ae’: æs => aes
- cū is transcribed as ‘cum’
- ī and ī are transcribed as ‘in’
- i- and j- at the beginning of terms are transcribed as ‘i’: jnv. => inv.
- i and j at the end of terms are transcribed as ‘j’: Mai. => Maj.
- u to be pronounced as v is transcribed as ‘v’: priuilegio => privilegio
- v to be pronounced as u is transcribed as ‘u’: dedicatvs => dedicatus

Otherwise transcriptions are literal, with any lines, dots or accents above letters as well as ligatures ignored, although for clarity in some cases abbreviations are written in full between square brackets or with a scope note or with a translation or with a time period, such as ‘sup[er]. p[er]m. or jnu. [= inv.]’ or ‘di Greg. PP. xiiij ex privil. per an. X [= ten year privilege from Pope Gregory XIII]’ or ‘[early 18th century]’.

Unusual spellings are transcribed the way they are, such as prevelegio. Apparent mistakes in the original are transcribed the way they are, such as dilin. (in letterpress) stays dilin., although it was amended to delin. in variant 2 of state I, probably a correction made at the press (see Christoffel Jegher after Peter Paul Rubens, Portrait of a Man; H. IX.192.20-I).

Publishers added their places of publication in engravings and woodcuts from the first quarter of the sixteenth century, see the examples above; engravers started adding names of places where they worked from the middle of the eighteenth century. For Latin place names see: J.G.T. Graesse, F. Benedict, Orbis Latinus: Lexikon lateinischer geographischer Namen des Mittelalters und der Neuzeit; Großausgabe, eds. H. Plechl and S.-C. Plechl, (Braunschweig 1972). The website <http://www.columbia.edu/acis/ets/Graesse/contents.html> transcribes the 1909 edition of Graesse’s dictionary and enables searching by word-image. However, the printed editions of 1971 and 1972 are more up to date and the 1972 edition mentioned above has more place names. See also: <http://net.lib.byu.edu/~catalog/people/r/m/latin/names.htm> (scroll to the bottom).

Finally, it will be understood that the meaning of terms and abbreviations requires prudent interpretation, because there were and still are no prescriptive laws or regulations for their particular use. For example, Elizabeth Blackwell (1707–1758) signed plates for her A Curious Herbal (1st ed. 1737) “Elizabeth Blackwell delin., sculp. & pinxit”, which should be understood as that she made the drawings for the design, drew the design in the etching ground and coloured the impressions by hand herself. In most other cases “pinxit” relates to the person after whose painting the print was made.
