Guide to the Consultation of the Dataset

Abstract

The dataset was generated within the research project Constructing AcTive CitizensHIp with European Youth: Policies, Practices, Challenges and Solutions (CATCH-EyoU) funded by European Union, Horizon 2020 Programme - Grant Agreement No 649538. Work Package 7 of this project aims to test the processes in youth’s construction of active EU citizenship on various social and psychological levels. The main file contains quantitative data from the first wave of the longitudinal survey on adolescents and young adults

(age 15-26). Data collection was carried out in the Czech Republic (regions Prague, South Moravian, Moravian-Silesian, Pardubicky, Vysocina) from October to December 2016. The supplementary files contain national translations of the questionnaire for the younger (15-19) and the older (20-26) subgroups.

File specifics

To create the .csv file was used "LibreOffice Calc" version: 3.5.0rc3 with the following specifics:

- Character set Windows-1250/WinLatin2 (Central Europe)
- Field delimiter « , » (comma)

The .sav file (SPSS) can be processed using "R" (library "foreign"): <https://cran.r-project.org>

Methodologies

Recruitment procedures, problems and experiences

Younger participants (15-19)

Data collection was done in five (out of 14) regions in the Czech Republic (Prague, South Moravia, Moravia-Silesia, Pardubice, Vysocina) from October to December 2016. First, a list of all upper secondary (high) schools was created based on the official register of public and private schools of the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports. Next, one grammar school (i.e. higher academic school track) and one or two vocational schools (i.e. lower vocational school track) were randomly selected from the list for every region. Overall, data was collected in 13 schools from all available classes in grade 11 and 12 (in total, 33 classes with one to five classes per school).

Directors of the selected schools were contacted via e-mail or telephone with an outline of the study and a request for participation. If they agreed, forms containing informed consents and information sheets were sent to the school. Students were asked to take these forms home, let their parents to complete them, and bring them back on the day of data collection.

Data collection was conducted as a part of regular teaching and did not take more than one teaching hour (45 minutes). Data was collected in classrooms by researchers who came to the school, explained the purpose and basic principles (e.g., voluntary participation) of the study, collected the forms with informed consents, and administered paper questionnaires to students. Students without informed consents signed by their parents were not allowed to participate. At the beginning of each questionnaire, students were instructed to create their anonymous unique identification code that will be used to match the questionnaires with answers from Time 2.

Older participants (20-26)

Data was collected by a professional research agency in the above-mentioned five regions from October to November 2016. A sample was constructed using quota sampling (based on population in the place of residence, sex, age, and occupational status), and the agency employed their established network of interviewers and research contacts.

funded from the European Union's Horizon 2020 Research and Innovation Programme under Grant Agreement N. 649538

A majority of participants completed online questionnaires (57%), while the rest (43%) were interviewed using computer-assisted personal interviewing. Monetary rewards were given to participants (online interviews) or interviewers (personal interviewing). On average, participants spent 30 minutes completing online questionnaires, or 35 minutes conducting personal interview.

There were no major problems reported by the agency except for a limited willingness of young people to take part in personal interviewing without monetary incentives. A contact information for the purposes of data collection at Time 2 was obtained from 90% participants.

Sample description

Sociodemographic descriptive statistics of the sample can be found in Table 1. Total numbers of participants were 532 in the younger and 814 in the older group. Mean ages were 16.85 and 22.74. In both age groups, women were slightly overrepresented (55%). There was a greater proportion of participants living in a big city in the older group (44%) compared to the younger group (18%). On the other hand, the proportion of participants living in a village was greater in the younger (44%) than the older group (17%). A majority of participants perceived the income of their household as fully covering all its needs (participants in the younger group were more optimistic, 69%, than in the older group, 51%).

In the younger group, 55% participants attended a higher (academic) school track and 45% a lower (vocational) school track. A proportion between lower-track and higher-track students is approximately 70:30 in the Czech Republic<sup>1</sup>, thus higher-track students were overrepresented in our sample. In the older group, 54% participants were still in education. As about 40% of young people are expected to graduate at a tertiary level of education in the Czech Republic<sup>2</sup>, young people still in education were slightly overrepresented.

Only 2% of the sample had other than the majority (i.e. Czech, Moravian or Silesian) nationality. Based on the 2011 census, 93% 15-24 year-olds have the majority nationality in the Czech Republic<sup>3</sup>, which means that young people from national minorities were slightly underrepresented in our sample.

In terms of parental education, approximately three quarters of parents had upper secondary and one quarter had higher education. Numbers of parents with lower secondary or uncompleted compulsory education were only negligible. In the Czech Republic in the population of 25-64 year-olds, 7% completed lower secondary, 71% upper secondary, and 22% higher education<sup>4</sup>. Hence, parents with lower secondary education were underrepresented in our sample, but the proportion between parents with upper secondary and higher education was similar to the population.
