THE ROLE OF MEDIA IN SHAPING CONFLICT NARRATIVES: COMPARISON OF THE BAKASSI AND AMBAZONIA CONFLICTS

The following list includes online articles that served as the primary data sources for the qualitative content analysis conducted in this study. These texts were imported into MAXQDA software for systematic coding and thematic analysis. The selection covers diverse media perspectives on the Bakassi Peninsula conflict and the Ambazonian (Anglophone) crisis, spanning across international, and local coverage. The articles were chosen based on relevance, publication credibility, and representativeness of key narratives related to sovereignty, self-determination, conflict framing, and human rights. These sources provided the empirical basis for identifying dominant frames, discourse patterns, and media portrayals of the conflicts.

All articles were publicly accessible at the time of data collection and were cited in accordance with academic standards. Where necessary, user identities or sensitive information from comment sections were anonymized to uphold ethical research standards.
